I’m putting my name forward as a delegate to the PSAC Convention because I care deeply about our members and the direction of our union. As both a committed member and part of our local executive team, I’ve seen how standing together can transform workplaces, strengthen communities, and ensure fairness for everyone. What drives me most is the belief that no one should have to navigate workplace challenges alone, and that good representation starts with listening and understanding.

My work within the EDI network has shown me how essential it is for our union to champion equity in real, practical ways. Facing accessibility barriers and dealing with DTA issues myself has given me firsthand insight into how systems can fall short—and how important it is to have strong advocates pushing for meaningful change. These experiences motivate me to work even harder for our members and ensure their concerns are not only heard but acted on.

I’ve supported coworkers through difficult situations, contributed to committee work, and helped share information that keeps members connected. These moments have shaped how I approach union work: with empathy, clarity, and a willingness to step up when needed.

I’m seeking election as a delegate because I want to help shape the conversations and decisions that guide our union’s future. I’m committed to ensuring that diverse member voices, especially those who often go unheard, are part of that discussion. I will bring a grounded, collaborative, and principled approach to convention work, advocating for equity, accessible workplaces, and strong public services.

Thank you for considering my nomination.
